Rent glossary

What Does PCM Mean in Rent?

PCM means per calendar month. A rent listing of GBP 1,200 PCM means GBP 1,200 for one calendar month, not one 4-week period.

- PCM means per calendar month

Per calendar month rent uses calendar months, which vary from 28 to 31 days. It is different from weekly rent and from an every-4-weeks cycle, which repeats every 28 days.

PCM describes a rent period. It does not interpret lease terms, fees, included costs, or legal obligations.

Compare weekly and PCM conventions

PW (per week) and PCW (per calendar week) both describe a seven-day week here. PCM means per calendar month. Check which conversion your agreement uses: a 52-week budget and a 365-day equivalent give slightly different answers.

Four weeks would be £2,000.00 for 28 days. That is a different payment period from PCM.

Both directions use matching fractions; reversing a rounded display may differ by a few pence. Calculations retain decimal precision until display rounding. A 52-week budget covers 364 days; the daily-rate model spreads 365 days over 12 months, including in leap years. Neither counts the actual payments in a particular year, nor determines what your contract requires. GBP is a currency label, with no exchange conversion.

Source checked 13 November 2026: DWP's rented-housing guide uses weekly × 52 ÷ 12 for Universal Credit. That benefit calculation does not prescribe every private agreement. The 365-day figure is RentConverter's stated comparison model, not a UK legal rule. This comparison is not legal or financial advice.
