Australia move-in arithmetic

Print / Save PDF

Rent in Advance and Bond Calculator Australia

Estimate rent in advance, a bond amount, and the combined upfront total from the amounts you enter.

Weekly rent

500

Weeks of rent paid in advance

Enter the number stated in the agreement or request; no legal default is supplied.

Enter advance-rent weeks.

Bond amount (AUD)

Enter 0 intentionally to calculate without a bond.

Enter bond amount.

Enter valid weekly rent, advance-rent weeks, and bond amount to calculate the estimate.

▼ Check the rent covered by a payment

Use the weekly rent entered above to check a dated rent payment. Enter only the rent portion: a bond is separate security and is not credited as rent here. This check uses weekly rent ÷ 7 for each covered day; use it only if that matches your agreement or receipt.

First covered day

02/28/2028

Last covered day (included)

03/02/2028

Rent payment excluding bond (AUD)

285.71

4 covered days: 2028-02-28 through 2028-03-02

Weekly rent used: A$500.00.

0 full weeks and 4 days, including both dates.

| Calculated rent for these dates | Rent payment entered |
| --- | --- |
| A$285.71 | A$285.71 |

The entered payment matches this calculated period.

At the same weekly rate: a fortnight (14 days) is A$1,000.00; the 365-day average calendar-month equivalent is A$2,172.62. Neither sets your next contractual payment date.

Dates count actual calendar days, including 29 February. The weekly amount uses the same parsing and cent rounding as the estimate above. The daily charge is not rounded before calculating the covered period total. The monthly comparison always uses weekly × 365 ÷ 84. No fees, prior credits, rent changes or bond deductions are included. This is an arithmetic check, not a legal rent ledger, demand for payment, or finding of arrears. AUD labels amounts; no currency exchange takes place.

Sources checked 13 November 2026: Consumer Affairs Victoria's calculator explains its 365-day monthly comparison. NSW Fair Trading lists rental bond and rent in advance separately. Those sources do not establish a universal Australian payment rule. Check your state or territory and agreement; this is not legal advice.

Compare a different rent period or proration basis

Official state and territory rental resources

Check the authority for the state or territory where the property is located. These links provide official information; RentConverter does not summarize or apply their legal rules.

- New South Wales renting information
- Consumer Affairs Victoria renting information
- Queensland Residential Tenancies Authority
- South Australia renting and letting information
- Western Australia Consumer Protection renting information
- Tasmania Consumer, Building and Occupational Services renting information
- Australian Capital Territory renting and occupancy laws
- Northern Territory Consumer Affairs residential tenancies

Frequently Asked Questions

Does the calculator choose a legal bond or advance-rent amount? v

Can I enter a zero bond? v

What is included in the upfront total? v